The 2011 Derwent Poetry Festival celebrates the publication of ten new poetry titles from Templar Poetry, and is a unique event in the poetry calendar. It is a chance to meet and hear some of the best new poetry being written today, and poets from across the country will be reading from their latest work published by Templar Poetry.

This year six poets will receive their awards, and read from their newly published short and full collections. Clive Allen, Andrew Jamison and Christopher James will read from their 2011 Templar Pamphlet Award winning pamphlets. The three winners of the inaugural Straid Collection Awards, Kathleen Jones, Susanne Ehrhardt and Martin Malone will read from their new collections, alongside a first collection from Michael Woods. There are also three anthology readings throughout the festival and the events are being recorded for release later as an audio CD and on the Templar website. Running alongside the readings we are running our first ever writing workshops at the festival. The full list of Templar Poetry titles, the new issue of Iota Poetry and a range of other books are available throughout the festival at the Festival Bookshop. We are also delighted to welcome Mimi Khalvati, our Saturday Evening guest poet.

Thanks to the proprietors and the staff of Masson Mills for supporting the Derwent Poetry Festival since its earliest origins.
